ing and the nominee entertained his guests between messages with numerous stories and laughed heartily at the stories told on himself.

Knows the Lincoln People.
Some one remarked just before sunrise that the people would be out to congratulate him before he had received his nomination. "They won't here very early," he replied, "the people of Lincoln have become used to candidates."

Mr. Bryan led the applause at this story told by a Kansas City newspaper man: "A man in Kansas City said I intend to vote for Taft this year." "Why?" he was asked. "Because I can vote for Bryan any time."

Mr. Bryan answered this by saying that after he had made a speech in Indiana for Judge Parker, a man inquired: "Who's running against Mr. Bryan this year?"

In Happy Mood.
The above gives an idea how the democratic nominee spent the night. He frequently led a chorus of whistlers and suggested singing and playing upon the piano, but changed his mind after recalling that Mrs. Bryan had retired. The Western Union Telegraph company had one matron in the office of Mr. Bryan, and another in the sun parlor and an operator at each instrument.

Mr. Bryan spent the greater portion of the night before midnight in his private office and then abandoned that and stayed with the pews men in the sun parlor.

Early this morning, every whistle in town began to blow and the demonstration continued as if the life with the delegates at Denver in the length of time and the amount of energy that could be expended in the celebration.

Neighbors Drop In.
From Lincoln and the outlying districts, those who knew the Bryan family came to congratulate them on the honor that has fallen to the master of Fairview. Next door neighbors, farmers from Normal and all parts of Lancaster county, came to pay their respects to both Mr. and Mrs. Bryan and wish them success at the election.

They came by street car and later there were all kinds of vehicles, from the old-fashioned lumber wagon to the latest automobile, carrying friends and neighbors, eager to give their evidences of good will. By 10:30 the lawn in front of the house was crowded by about 2,000 people.

From the city of Lincoln, came a large delegation preceded by a brass band and a large American flag, carried by James Kern. From the time they came in sight until they drew up in front of the Bryan residence they shouted and yelled and cheered and when the nominee spoke to them, they punctuated every sentence with cheers and applause.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan received the crowd in front of the house and spoke from the steps. The great demonstration paid them and several times the speaker was obliged to stop because of his emotions. During his talk Mrs. Bryan was frequently in tears, caused by the homage paid by those who had been friends for two decades.

Speech to His Neighbors.
In his speech Mr. Bryan avoided politics and begged his republican neighbors to overlook in the future any language on political issues which would differ from theirs were they in his place. Mr. Bryan's speech is as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen and Neighbors: It is very kind of you to come out to indicate your good will at this time when a great honor has come to this family, and I want to express for Mrs. Bryan and myself gratitude and appreciation for these evidences of your friendly interest and good will.

"The esteem of one's neighbors is a priceless asset to anyone. The honors of public life often come under circumstances for which the recipient is not entirely responsible. There are sometimes waves that carry into office those who have little expectation of being elected and carry out of office those who have every reason to expect a continuance of public favor. I may recall two of such within the memory of all of us. "You will remember that in 1890 there was a great democratic tidal wave which swept into office many who at the time of nomination had little expectation of success. Four years later there was another tidal wave—a republican wave—that swept out of office a great many democrats and into office a great many republicans who hardly expected to succeed. Circumstances are potent in the present success of the people. Therefore you cannot build securely upon honors that come without necessarily much effort or merit on your part. But the affections that are formed between man and man are strengthened day by day and knitting the past more closely together as they go by. These are permanent; these are more significant.

Appreciates His Neighbors.
"I want to say to you, my friends, that we appreciate the cordial friendships that have been growing up between us and our associates in this community during the last two decades and it is generous and gracious on your part to come at this time to increase the greatness of this day. I do not know what the future has in store for us, a kind providence conceals from us the book of fate. We learn each day what each day is to bring forth and we must be prepared for whatever comes, but I will say to you, that I appreciate the generous good will and affection so many of the American people have shown me and I could appreciate any office that could come to me. I would rather have the love of those who know me than any other thing on earth. (Loud applause and cheering, the band playing 'Dixie' and several cheers and tapers being given by the crowd.)

"I am not going to make a political speech. I kind of wish I could go through this campaign without making any political speech."

Word to Republicans.
"I hate to say anything that could cause the least bit of antagonism in this community, but it may be necessary, after a while (laughter) for me to say just a few words that would indicate my political leanings. (Laughter and applause.)

"It may be necessary for me to endorse platform utterances and to make principles, and I want to ask the forbearance of republican friends if I do not always express myself in the language that they would use if they were speaking on the same subject. (Applause and cries of 'You can do it all right!') But I want to assure you, before the campaign opens up and before I have to make a political speech, I want to assure you now that whatever I may say on the subjects that divide us, whatever arguments I may advance in support of those policies which to me seem best for the country, I want you always to know and never to forget that I believe that the things that bind us together as citizens are more important and more numerous than our political differences. (Great applause.)

"I want you to know that however earnest I may be in the presentation of any political idea, I recognize at all times the equal right of every other citizen to hold opinions, and as I respect you no less for candidly stating your views, I hope you will think none the less of me if I candidly state my views when occasion calls for a statement. (Applause.)

"I like to believe that every American citizen places his love of country above his love of party. I like to believe that every American citizen prefers the triumph of that which is right to the triumph of that which he may believe to be right if he is in fact mistaken."

Love of Country.
"And, my friends, building on this basis, we can be both earnest and charitable, for if we love our country more than we love our party, if we desire the triumph of justice more than the triumph of erroneous opinions, we are prepared for either victory or defeat, for if we win, we know that the victory can only be permanent, if it is a deserved victory and if it results in the advancement of the commonwealth, and we know that if defeat comes it can only be temporary if we are in fact right and those who win are wrong, and thus believing in the omnipotence of truth, we are prepared to meet each other upon an honest ground, discuss our differences honestly, bow submissively, try submissively to the will of the people, and pray that whichever party wins the country's good will be preserved. (Great applause and cheering.)

"My father was a devout man. He did not leave me much in the way of money and I am not sure but it was better for me that he did not, for I believe that great wealth is more often a curse than a blessing to the young man who inherits it. A prospective fortune large enough to relieve one from the necessity of toil is more apt to paralyze one's energies than to be a source of inspiration to him. But while my father did not leave me a fortune, he left me something that has been worth more to me than all the money of any millionaire could have been. He taught me to love that every righteous principle would triumph. (Applause.)

His Father's Teaching.
"He told me when a boy that I could afford to be in the minority, but that I could not afford to be wrong on any question; that if I was in the minority and right, I would sometime be in the majority. (Applause and cheers and cries of 'you will now!') and that if I was in the majority and wrong, I would sometime be in the minority. I say to you, my friends, that that advice given me by my father has been worth more to me than any amount of money could have been. And I believe that it is a principle that we should imbue in the minds and the hearts of all confidence of the triumph of every righteous cause. If evils come, let us have confidence in the intelligence and the integrity and the patriotism of the people. I am an optimist. I believe the world is growing better; I believe that the great movements for the uplifting of society are going forward with resistless force. We cannot stop the triumph of the truth. We may accelerate it, we may retard it, we cannot stop it."

Nomination Not Bought.
"But if I were to talk to you on principles like these you would be tempted to apply them to conditions (laughter and applause) and to the issues, and that is not my purpose this morning. A great honor has fallen to me. The voters of a great party have made me their standard bearer. I need not tell you that I did not buy this nomination. I need not tell you that I had no way of coercing people. Why, my friends, I have no way of coercing the people who live about me—no way of coercing the people of Normal or of Lincoln or of Lancaster or of Nebraska, much less of the United States. It is not for me to say whether they have acted wisely at Denver or not; I am glad that the responsibility is theirs, not mine. (Laughter.)

As to the Campaign.
"This I know: I appreciate it because it has been a free-will offering presented by some 6,000,000 of my countrymen. We are going to do the best we can to present to the public the issues of this campaign. We are going to meet you as we can, and then we are going to believe that whatever the result is on election day, it is going to be good, and if it is for us, we will feel that we are going to be permitted to put into practice the principles which will be presented, and if it is against us, we will know that we can learn by the manner in which our opponents apply their principles whether they were right in advocating them or we right in opposing them."

"You have come out at the beginning of the campaign. Come out just as often as you will. And there is one thing about it, the pleasure of success will be moderated by the fact that it will take us from you, and the sorrow of defeat will be softened by the fact that it will leave us with you." (Great applause and cheering.)

After the address was concluded there was music by the band, the Mexican sernade, "La Paloma," being played, it being the nominee's favorite, he explaining that the piece was more appropriate now, it meaning "the dove," since those animated emblems of harmony were set free in the convention hall at Denver. After hand-shaking which followed was over the visitors were shown about the farm and through the house.

NEW JERSEY MEMBER BOLTS
Eugene W. Leake, Democratic Congressman, New Jersey, bolted.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Eugene W. Leake, democratic member of congress for the Sixth district of New Jersey, wrote today to William H. Taft announcing that he will vote for Mr. Taft and offering his services to the republican nominee during the coming campaign.

Mr. Leake's letter follows: "My father was a devout man. He did not leave me much in the way of money and I am not sure but it was better for me that he did not, for I believe that great wealth is more often a curse than a blessing to the young man who inherits it. A prospective fortune large enough to relieve one from the necessity of toil is more apt to paralyze one's energies than to be a source of inspiration to him. But while my father did not leave me a fortune, he left me something that has been worth more to me than all the money of any millionaire could have been. He taught me to love that every righteous principle would triumph. (Applause.)

Deaths From Oil on Fire
Fatalities and Injuries Follow Effort to Start Blaze Near Nevada, Ia.

NEVADA, Ia., July 10.—Two children are dead and the mother of one is not expected to live, while the home of the afflicted family is in ashes as the result of a frightful accident which occurred last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Stephens, three miles northwest of here.

The dead: LUCY BOWERS, aged 7 years. ROY STEPHENS, aged 5 years. Dangerously injured: Mrs. N. J. Stephens.

The dead girl, who was employed in the Stephens home, made the fatal error of trying to hasten the kitchen fire by the use of kerosene. The oil in the can exploded, setting fire to her clothing and that of the boy, who was standing near.

Wool Brings Good Price.
CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 10.—(Special.)—Wool is now bringing satisfactory prices throughout Wyoming. Recent sales in central and northern portions were negotiated at prices ranging from 15 to 17 cents. Early in the spring the Wyoming and National Wool Growers associations advised growers to not accept the offerings of from eight to twelve cents for their wool, but to hold for better prices, predicting that wool would this year bring within a few cents of last year's prices, and sales of the last few days fully justify the correctness of the position taken by the associations.

INSULT HEAPED ON FISHER

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 10.—(Special Telegram.)—C. W. Barnhill arrived here from Marshalltown today and upon looking at J. L. Fisher, left fielder for the Omaha baseball club, declared he was not the J. L. Fisher who is wanted at Marshalltown on the charge of forging a signature to a railroad time check. Fisher was arrested at the hotel Mondamin Thursday afternoon. He protested at the time that there must be some mistake. W. A. Rourke, owner of the Omaha club, stayed by him, the other members of the club having departed for Omaha. Fisher was given his liberty today. He is known in baseball circles as "Red" Fisher.

The Omaha players and management at the hotel offered Fisher his release if he would leave the city. He refused to leave the city, saying that he would stay until he was released from custody and thus imposing a stigma on an innocent man. Whether anything will be done about it is not yet known.

BALL CONFESSES TO HOLDUP
Says He and Shercliff Together Held Up Northern Pacific Train in April.

DES MOINES, July 10.—Owen Ball, arrested at Marshalltown Wednesday evening in company with Mrs. Frank Shercliff, wife of the famous diamond robber, yesterday afternoon made a full and complete confession of his participation with Shercliff in the robbery of a Northern Pacific train in the city limits of Minneapolis on the night of April 16.

Ball also confessed to the robbery of a St. Paul drug store the night before. In this he was also assisted by Shercliff. Special Agent McFetridge of the Northern Pacific will leave Des Moines with his prisoner for St. Paul and Minneapolis this morning, and Ball has promised the officers he will conduct them to the spot where he and Shercliff hid a number of watches taken from passengers on the night of the holdup.

When Shercliff, in prison at Leadville, Colo., was shown the dispatch concerning Ball's arrest, he denied knowing Ball or having any knowledge of the Northern Pacific robbery.

He was attending the meeting of the State Bar association and seemed in the best of spirits. Just before he was stricken he remarked about his good health. A moment later he pitched forward dead.

Quitter Times in the South.
WASHINGTON, July 10.—For the moment there appears to be an abatement of the acute situation in Central America, growing out of the revolution in Honduras. A dispatch today from H. Percival Dodge, American minister to Honduras and Salvador, indicates that there is an amelioration of conditions on the Pacific side and that some reported activity on the Atlantic side lacks confirmation. The American government is making every effort to impress upon the Central American states the necessity of preserving neutrality in the interests of peace.

AIRSHIP IN LONG FLIGHT
Arrangements Being Perfected to Follow Count Zeppelin on Next Trip.

BERLIN, July 10.—Arrangements are being completed for Count Zeppelin's twenty-four hour flight in his new giant airship to take place July 14. There are to be twenty-two relays of automobiles carrying army officers, who will follow the Dreadnaught of the air along the roads from Friedrichshafen to Mayence. The occupants of the motor cars will communicate by telegraph with the headquarters on the Lake Constance, reporting incidents and the progress of the flight. Each motor car will carry a large white flag in the day in order to be recognized by the men in the airship, while in the night they will make their presence known by means of searchlight. Should the airship require assistance Count Zeppelin will fly a red flag during the day or show a red searchlight at night. All the military posts and police stations along the route, as well as the Rhine river police have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness night and day to give assistance.

FIVE LAWS PASSED EACH DAY
Louisiana Legislature Concludes After This Little Task Is Done.

BATON ROUGE, La., July 10.—The Louisiana assembly adjourned last night after a sixty days' session, in which, on the average, five laws were passed a day. The total of new statutes was over 200. The abolishment of race track gambling and the defeat of state-wide prohibition were the two big battles of the session. High license with many reforms in the conduct of saloons was substituted for prohibition.
